What Happens With All The Success Donald Trump Has Inherited With His Wealth After His Assassination?

Bryan Mullins The Fox 3 min read · Just now

After his potential assassination and Falling Maple Orange that follows shortly after, what will become of Trump's golf courses, all his hotels, buildings, businesses, and even the wealth itself?

And if either one gets it or what not, what will they do with it all? Especially if there's no inheritance clause or deed to everything he achieved in the roughly 50 years since Trump himself started being a successful rich man.

Here's three hypothetical scenarios I'm going to entertain for the sake of entertainment purposes only. I don't want any of this to happen and it's my worst fear for this year.

The first hypothetical: Donald Trump Jr. being the primary beneficiary of Trump's wealth, ownership of all Trump businesses, etcetera with 4 main points of focus:

#1. Donald Trump Jr. (born in 1977) is the eldest son of President Donald John Trump himself, and hence being most likely to determine and decide who gets what percentage of every bit of success Trump inherited from wealth from his own father Fred Trump.

#2. Once he determines and decides who gets a percentage or cut of what, Donald Trump Jr. will look upon Elon Musk as the person that takes his place when Don Jr. himself can't handle it anymore.

#3. Don Jr. can decide which businesses stay and which ones go, the same goes for everything else Trump built with his own damn name.

#4. Barron Trump might even be next in line if Don Jr. rejects the offer to be the first one to inherit everything Trump has got after his potential assassination.

The second hypothetical: Eric Trump and Elon Musk being co-inheritors of Trump's entire wealth and business buildup, with three main points of focus:

#1. If Don Jr. rejects the one-time offer of being the first one to inherit everything from Donald Trump, and Barron Trump himself chooses to reject it as well, Eric Trump will most likely ask Elon Musk if he can share half and Eric himself shares the other half.

#2. If Elon Musk rejects the "half and half" offer, then Eric must take it upon himself to either give it back to Don Jr. or inherit it all on his own.

#3. If Elon Musk accepts and agrees with the "half and half" offer, he might ask for a renovation to the Trump towers to include his last name…in exactly this way "Trump and Musk!"

The third and final hypothetical: Barron Trump is given all of Trump's fortunes, ownership of all the buildings, golf courses by Donald Trump Jr. and Eric Trump (with external approval of Elon Musk), with one two main points of focus:

#1. Barron Trump will become the youngest of Trumps to inherit all that wealth and will use a good portion of that to build a monumental memorial in Donald Trump's name…and he'll make that memorial into a monumentally large museum about Trump and all his successes and failures, leading up to his potential assassination.

#2. If Barron wants to, he can share Trump's inheritance with Donald Trump Junior, Eric Trump, and even Elon Musk.

Now with all those three hypotheticals out of the way, let me explain all the three outcomes I'll predict as to what may happen after the inheritance is made known and clear:

#1. The next beneficiary will have either sole control or half of it all, or even a fraction of it.

#2. All the successful businesses, towers, and wealth will be thrown away, so that others can share wealth and success of their own.

#3. All the success, businesses, towers, and wealth will be abandoned and not inherited at all.

Here are the two predictions I'm personally going with:

#1. Barron Trump is given all of Trump's fortunes, ownership of all the buildings, golf courses by Donald Trump Jr. and Eric Trump (with external approval of Elon Musk).

#2. All the successful businesses, towers, and wealth after being inherited to Barron, will just be thrown away, so that others can share wealth and success of their own.
